Photographer Harry M. Walker explores classic icons in the north in LOG CABINS OF ALASKA. From humble wilderness shelters to the most breathtaking homes, both traditional and contemporary. Walker captures in pictures and words the essence of these log structures that still symbolize the American pioneering spirit and evoke images of Jack London and Robert Service. Walker has traveled throughout Alaska to collect these entertaining and insightful stories about a host of eclectic and sometimes eccentric characters, illustrating them with more than one hundred color photographs that invite you to step inside the wooden structures and have a look around.
